Annotation. This article analyzes the harmonization of national and universal values in the process of forming the worldview of youth from a socio-philosophical point of view. The issues of forming the spiritual image of young people in the era of globalization, instilling in them respect for values common to humanity along with an awareness of national identity are covered.

Keywords: youth, worldview, national values, universal values, spirituality, culture, globalization, morality, enlightenment.

Introduction. In the context of globalization processes, the formation of the modern cultural image of youth is inextricably linked with all spheres of social life. The worldview and cultural image of youth are one of the main spiritual indicators of social development. The place of universal values in the thinking of young people is directly related to their social activity, tolerance and spiritual perfection.

Modern youth should act with the goal of contributing to the development of their country and serving the well-being of humanity. After all, the future of each nation depends, first of all, on the intellectual potential, level of knowledge and spiritual maturity of young people.

The process of globalization is characterized by increased integration between the economic, political, cultural and social spheres of the modern world, the expansion of mutually influential ties. This process is emerging as an important factor in the formation of the worldview, social consciousness and system of thinking of young people. The rapid development of information technologies, communication tools and international educational cooperation is expanding the opportunities for young people to quickly master various cultural and spiritual values, to think globally.

This feature of globalization enhances the convergence of young people with universal human values. Universal values such as human rights, democracy, environmental responsibility, tolerance take a firm place in the social consciousness of young people, ensuring their integration into the global community. Also, these values develop innovative thinking, communication skills, and a sense of responsibility for global problems in young people.

However, along with the positive aspects of globalization processes, its negative effects cannot be ignored. In particular, the weakening of national culture and values under the influence of global standards, the growing indifference to traditional customs and cultural heritage are emerging as urgent problems. This poses a threat to the weakening of national identity in the minds of young people, the erosion of national identity. At the same time, there is a possibility that cultural assimilation processes will lead to the disappearance of national values in the global flow. Therefore, the harmonization of national and universal values in the worldview of young people is a matter of strategic importance. National values are manifested through identity, historical heritage, customs, spiritual traditions, language and religious beliefs, and strengthen the socio-cultural identification of the individual. Separation from them can pose a threat to the spiritual stability and development of the nation. Therefore, it is an urgent task to preserve national values, instill them in the minds of young people, and develop them in accordance with global processes.

The harmony of national and universal values in the upbringing of the younger generation is realized on the basis of the following criteria:

- harmonious use of national and global values in the education system;
- preservation and promotion of cultural heritage;
- development of the national language and active use in communication processes;
- promotion of national culture through the media and modern technologies;
- support for international cultural cooperation and exchange programs;
- strengthening national values in the family and collective upbringing environment.

When these factors are implemented harmoniously, young people are formed as individuals who are not only committed to universal values, but also raised in the spirit of respect for national culture. As a result, they will be able to actively participate in the global arena, implement international cooperation, and preserve their national identity.

In conclusion, globalization processes are creating new opportunities for young people by expanding their worldview. At the same time, due to the threat of weakening national values, educating young people in harmony with national and universal values remains an important strategic task in today's conditions. This approach is an important factor in strengthening national identity, preserving cultural diversity, and ensuring the successful adaptation of young people to global processes.
